Visitar París en barco

Temporada alta (de abril a septiembre)

Salidas cada aproximadamente 20 minutos desde las 10:00 hasta las 22:30. La duración del crucero es de aproximadamente una hora y diez minutos.

Cada año, la Compagnie des Bateaux-Mouches® acoge a más de 2.500.000 pasajeros lo cual la convierte en el cuarto monumento parisino de pago más visitado después de la Torre Eiffel, el Museo del Louvre y el Centro Nacional de Arte y Cultura Georges Pompidou.

La Compagnie des Bateaux Mouches® destaca claramente como la referencia imprescindible para un crucero por el Sena. Tómese el tiempo de visitar París de otra manera y de descubrir el corazón histórico de la Ciudad de la Luz mientras se desliza suavemente por su avenida más hermosa. Un paseo comentado, una comida en un restaurante singular o una cena romántica, cada uno tiene su crucero...

La Torre Eiffel, el Louvre, Notre Dame de Paris, La Conciergerie, el Museo de Orsay... Los monumentos que integran la riqueza del patrimonio parisino representan las etapas imprescindibles de cualquier estancia turística. Visitar París en barco le permitirá cambiar de perspectiva y descubrir el corazón histórico de la capital de manera distinta, desde un ángulo diferente. La Compagnie des Bateaux Mouches® le ofrece la posibilidad de embarcarse a bordo de uno de sus 6 barcos panorámicos para realizar un bonito paseo comentado por el Sena. Las salidas para los cruceros paseo tienen lugar a diario y se realizan tanto de día como de noche.

Trip 3:	14:30	16:00	M/S "Reine"
Trip 4 (extra):	15:30	17:00	M/S "Maan Explorer"

We are very easy to find since we are close to a well known landmark, namely Andenes Lighthouse. No matter which way you come from, you only need to follow the way taking you to the lighthouse and you will find our whale center 50 metres away in a grey building. Our friendly receptionists will greet you, check you in, inform about the latest offers and explain what will happen after having checked in. Basically our whale safari trip ticket consists of a guided tour in our museum and boat trip out at sea to see the whales.

Do you need a place to stand with camper or caravan, we recommend Andenes Camping where you have a wonderful view of the sea and can enjoy the midnight sun traveling across the sky.

The pier where the boats are is only a couple of minutes away from the whale centre if you drive or about ten minutes if you decide to walk. Our guides usually start to board the boat approximately 15 minutes before departure. It is recommended to bring warm clothes since it usually are a little bit more windy and colder out at sea. After boarding, there will be some practical information about the boat, the whale watching trip and especially about safety.

Thank you! Your reservation is confirmed.

Whale safari from Andenes (Summer - big boat)

Hamnegata 1C, 8480, Andenes, Norway, Phone : +47 76115600 , booking@whalesafari.no

Description

Whalesafari Andenes has almost 30 year experience in whale watching, offers experienced guides and crew and the shortest distance to the whale ground.

We operate with a unique 100% whale guarantee: if the boat does not find any cetacean, you can participate in a new whale safari (you need to re-book yourself at our reception), or we will refund you the whale safari ticket (minus admin expenses that are around 10%). The whale guarantee applies only to the whale safari ticket in case you bought a travel package.

At our centre you will also find an exclusive gift shop and a restaurant with a sea view.

The boat tours are normally between 2 and 4 hours, but they can be shorter or longer depending where the whales are that day.

VERY IMPORTANT: you have to meet up to check in 2 hours and 15 minutes before your boat departure. 1 hour and 30 minutes before that you will be guided in our museum (the guided tour in the museum is around 1 hour).

We can offer travel packages as well with the following items:

Activities summer: whale safari with big boat, bird safari, mountain excursions and more.

Activities winter: whale safari with big and small boat, northern light observation (from land, boat, mountaing, wood and bus), dog sledging and more.

Activities the while year: whale safari, fishing trips, Sami culture and reindeer, sightseeing, Spaceship Aurora and more.

Accommodation: hotels, cabins, guest houses, hostel, lodge and camping.

Transportation: bus with 8, 16 og 48 setet

Festvåggtind

Mountain Name: Festvåggtind – Location: Austvågøy – Elevation: 541m – Difficulty: Moderate – Time: 1.5-2 hours to top

Festvåggtind is one of those peaks that seems to rise directly from the sea. From the road, it looks impossibly steep, but the route to the summit wraps around the mountain and never becomes too steep (by Lofoten standards). Located just north of Henningsvær, the easily accessible summit provides fantastic panoramic views over the islands of the village below. Somewhat reminiscent of Reinebringen, Festvåggtind's views make for a rewarding finish to this short hike.

Getting there

From anywhere on Lofoten, travel towards Henningsvær, located on the southern side of Austvågøy. Leaving the E10 and driving towards Henningsvær, after 5 km the road will make a strong left turn in front of some large buildings. Your first option for parking is here. Or, continuing along the road for another few hundred meters the road makes a strong right turn, just past here will be a pullout on the right side, you can also park here.

If you parked at the buildings, continue walking down the road towards the rocky slope at the back of the strong right turn in front of you. If you parked at the second pullout, walk back along the road. The trail begins by ascending the rocky slope on the mountain side of the right turn.

From the road, you will see an obvious and worn trail coming out of the bushes. Take this.

The trail

Leaving the road, the trail heads into the bushes and towards a large boulder field. You will initially pass the foundation of an old building before heading across the rocks. The trail can be easy to lose here, as there are several ways one can go. Just keep heading up, towards the center of the the hill in front of you.

After crossing the last of the big boulders, you should be back on the trail and heading up the mountain. After a short while you will come to a split in the trail – stay to the left. The other route goes to a lower view point.

The trail gets closer to the cliffs on your left as you gain elevation up the mountain. One the small pond is visible below to your right to trail will begin to wrap around the backside of the mountain, taking you more north. Here it gets a little steeper and a little muddy at times, but never too bad.

Though it might look like you will have some cliffs to climb, the trail keeps winding its way up the mountain side until you finally reach the ridge and can look across to the sea on the other side. From here, follow the trail left, back souths towards the summit. There are a few rocks steps where hands will be needed, but nothing exposed or very difficult.

Reaching the summit, you will have fantastic views over Henningsvær, as the village spreads out across the small, rocky islands. If the weather is clear, then also enjoy the views towards Stamsund on your right, and across the Vestfjord to the Norwegian mainland.

Camping

There are a few camping possibilities for a small tent along the ridge, just before reaching the summit. It might be a bit muddy here though and could be easier just to sleep in the open on the slightly sloping heather. No water available after the small pond 1/2 way up the route. The ridge is exposed to any weather.

Hard, Steep, Slippery

1.5 - 2 hours

La ruta de Reinebringen desde Reine, la que te da acceso a la mejor panorámica a casi 500 metros de altura. Duración estimada: 3 horas

Muy recomendable es la ruta que sube a la cima del monte Reine, desde donde se obtiene una panorámica soberbia. La misma ruta puede hacerse en bicicleta

At a modest 448 meters high, Reinebringen is far from one of the highest peaks on the Lofoten islands. Yet this is more than made up for by the iconic view from the summit. The view, combined with the easy access from Reine and a constant flow of images on social media means that Reinebringen is one of the most popular hikes on Lofoten, with hundreds of people making the ascent each day. That said, the trail to the summit of Reinebringen is not really a hike, but rather a steep climb to a view point along the ridge.

A word of caution

In the last years with the ever growing popularity of Lofoten as a travel destination, Reinebringen has been seeing ever increasing crowds and the mountain is beginning to suffer. The trail is experiencing more and more erosion and rockfall is beginning to become an all too common occurrence. The local community is now discouraging hikers on the mountain until a new trail can be built.

I know a photo from the top along with some quote about living your dreams will get you thousands of likes on Instagram, but unless you're planning on visiting this peak on a day full of rainbows and flying unicorns, please think of whether you need to hike this mountain and not an alternative, such as: Festvåtind, Mannen, Stornappstind, or any of the countless other fantastic views across Lofoten.

You will still hike this mountain anyhow, so just be aware of your surroundings and pay attention to those hiking above and below you. And if you cause any rock fall, yell: 'ROCK!!!' as loud as you can to warn others below you.

Update – Autumn 2016: Work began in late summer 2016 to begin the construction of a stone path up the mountain. As of my writing, it has only been partially completed. When work begins again, it is asked that you avoid the area where work is occurring.

Getting There

Drive towards Reine. At the corner of the E10 and the turnoff into Reine is a parking area. Alternatively, on the Å side of Ramsvikstunnelen are several small pullouts along the E10.

From the parking area walk west (south) along the E10 in the direction of Å. Take the paved path along the outside of the tunnel (Ramsvikstunnelen). Where the path is close to connecting back with the E10 on the far side, look for a small trail emerging from the bushes. There is a painted arrow on the pathway pointing towards the trail head. In summer it should be fairly simple to locate.

The Trail

The hike begins as a fairly muddy path winding its way upwards through the low birch forest. Climbing higher up the mountain, the trees begin to thin and one will come across several short but wet rock steps to negotiate.

Once clear of the forest, the trail gradually steepens and alternates between turf (which can be wet/slippery) and rocky sections. If others are above you, there is risk of rockfall as the trail becomes more eroded from use. Stick to the main trail as much as possible and don't make any new paths.

The trail steepens in one final rocky ascent before finally reaching the ridge and the spectacular view over Reine. Many choose to stop here, or you can continue to the right up the steep rocks and follow the short trail to the last small peak. Alternatively, one can follow the trail towards the left which continues high up the ridge.

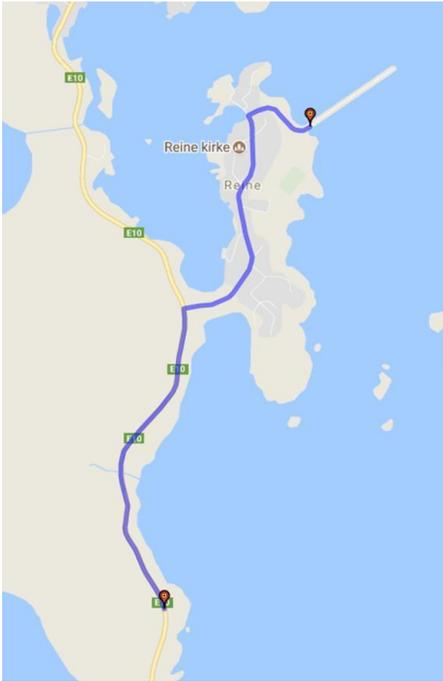

Camping

There are several places along the ridge where a tent can be pitched. All are completely exposed, so be aware of conditions and any incoming weather. No water is available near the top.

El senderismo hacia Kvalvika, la playa de las ballenas, uno de los más bonitos y escénicos

La ruta de Kvalvika desde Reine, ésta que estamos escribiendo. Duración estimada: 3 horas

Fredvang, Moskenesøy

200 meters, 2 km, Easy, 1 - 1.5 hours

Located in an isolated bay on the northern side of Moskenesøy and only reached by foot, Kvalvika feels as though it could be at the edge of the world, not an easy hour's walk. Here turquoise waves crash on golden sands and vertical cliffs rise into the clouds in a display of Lofoten at its best.

While quite popular as a day hike, Kvalvika is also a wonderful camping location, as most people leave in the late afternoon and you'll have the place mostly to yourself. And why not go take a swim under the midnight sun and then sit by a campfire late into the night?

Getting There

From any location on Lofoten, take the E10 to Fredvang. After leaving the E10 and crossing the twin bridges, turn left into Fredvang and continue along the road through the village. After approximately 3 kilometers (from the turn) you will see a red boat shed on the left near the water. Immediately past this is a paved parking turnout large enough for 10-15 cars. Park here.

If the parking area is full, DO NOT park along the road. Summer 2016 experienced heavy crowds at Kvalvika and the police have been writing tickets for illegal parking. In 2017 it is likely there will be a fee for parking as the council hopes to increase the size of the parking lot to accommodate all visitors

The Trail

Directly across from the parking area you will see a trail heading up the hill. There are several entrance points, but the main one has a recently added stone steps. The beginning of the trail is moderately boggy as it heads through the mountain birch and up the hill. After 10-15 minutes you will be mostly clear of the trees and head towards the center of the pass. Elevation gain is gentle here as the path takes you between the two mountains.

After about 30-40 minutes you will reach the top of the pass and begin the descend to the beach. Here the trail gets steep and rocky in places, and quite slippery if wet. Continue down towards the beach if you can see, or towards the sound of waves if you're in the clouds. About 1 hour after leaving the car park you should be arriving at the flat, grassy dunes at the back of the beach.

Camping

Kvalvika beach is an excellent place for camping. The back of the beach consists of flat grassy turf with plenty of scenic areas to pitch a tent. My favorite spot is hidden among a small rock outcropping a couple hundred meters to the left, as it helps you keep away from the hikers wandering around during the daylight hours. You might also have to clear away a bit of sheep 'debris' before pitching your tent, but it's never too bad.

The best source of water is from the stream coming down on the right side of the beach, next to the trail to Ryten. Driftwood should be in ample supply to get a good campfire going, just try and use an existing spot.

And as with all camping on Lofoten, be sure to check the weather forecast so as not to get caught out in a gale, even in summer.

Røren

Kvalvika Beach (aparcament 68.068203, 13.129937) – Aparcament Røren (68.099106, 13.134631), 7 min, 5,33 km

Mountain Name: Røren – Location: Moskenesøy – Elevation: 295m – Difficulty: Easy – Time: 45 minutes

Røren / Ytresandheia is not so much a mountain peak, but rather a long flat ridge on the northernmost tip of Moskenesøy. With only a small amount of elevation gain and a good trail, this short little hike provides fantastic views over the turquoise waters of Yttersand beach and across to the distant mountains of Flakstadøy. If you are just looking for a relatively easy walk with some nice views, this is a good choice.

Getting There

From the E10 head in the direction of Fredvang. Crossing the twin bridges and onto Moskenesøy, continue straight past the left turn to Fredvang and continue along the road, past the 'Frankenstein' barn, and turn right towards Yttersand. Park in the parking area at the end of the road.

The Trail

From the parking area, go past the gate and take small hiking trail on the left, which takes you back along the side of the mountain. As you continue back along the hillside, slowly gaining elevation you will soon come to the entrance of a small valley with a lake. From here, the trail turns right and begins to wind its way up the gentle ridge.

As you ascent to about 270 meters, the trail will begin to flatten out and you'll have the first views over Yttersand beach and the surrounding landscape. You can continue along the ridge as it takes you over several small prominences before coming to an end on the northern tip of Moskenesøy.

From here, you can turn around and return the way you came, or continue down into the valley of Stokkvika and make a loop on your return journey.

Camping

There are numerous camping possibilities up on the ridge and plateau, so you have many options for finding a place with a nice view to sit and watch the midnight sun. If the wind picks up, you can descend into the Stokkvika valley and find the abandoned settlement near the rocky beach

Sobre la platja d'Ytresand

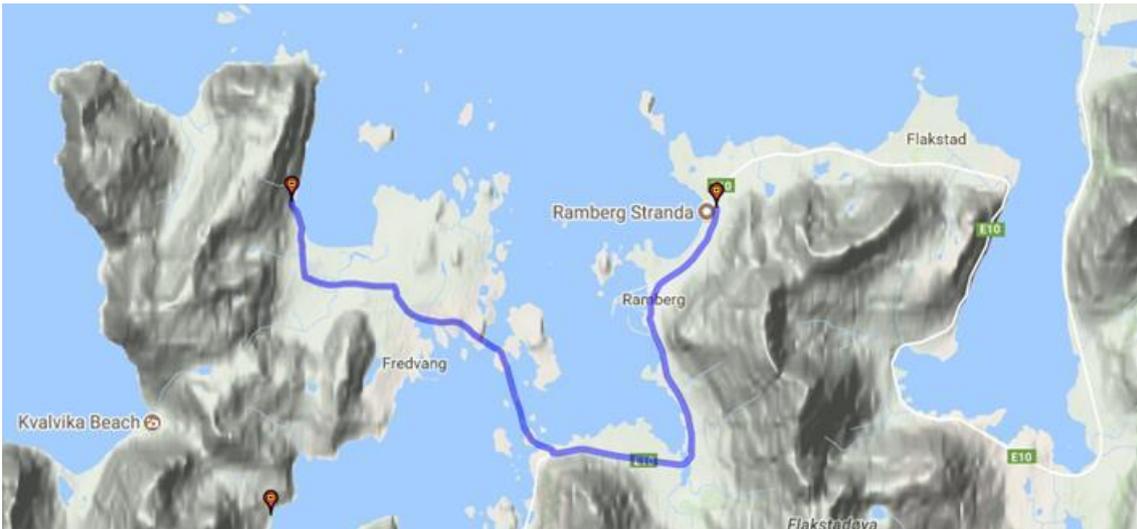

Yttersand, located on the northern tip of Moskenesøy is a narrow strip of sand at high tide and a large, flat rippled-sand beach at low tide. Facing almost directly north with a low ridge to the west, there are no mountains in the immediate background, with only the distant peaks of Flakstadøy if looking across the beach to the right. Mostly only reached by gentle waves, not much drama usually occurs here. The beach does have a tendency to collect seaweed, often leaving it with a cluttered appearance, except at low tide.

This beach is generally worth a visit at some point, but I wouldn't make it a priority for a sunrise or sunset shoot. That being said, the beach and surroundings are quite scenic when viewed from above, making the hike up Røren/Ytresandheia a worthy objective.

Parking is available in the parking area at the end of the road.

Situated right along the E10, Ramberg is Flakstadøy's biggest beach. A large crescent of white sand just to the east of the village, the beach is one of Lofoten's most popular areas. Though unfortunately for photography, the nearby buildings spoil the best photographic compositions, the setting is still stunningly scenic, and makes an enjoyable location for a midnight sun walk. You will no doubt pass this beach multiple times on any Lofoten trip. Though not a photographic priority, it is always worth a stop if the light is right. Parking is in the obvious parking area on the right side of the beach. It can also be accessed from Ramberg Camping.

I la Skagsanden beach

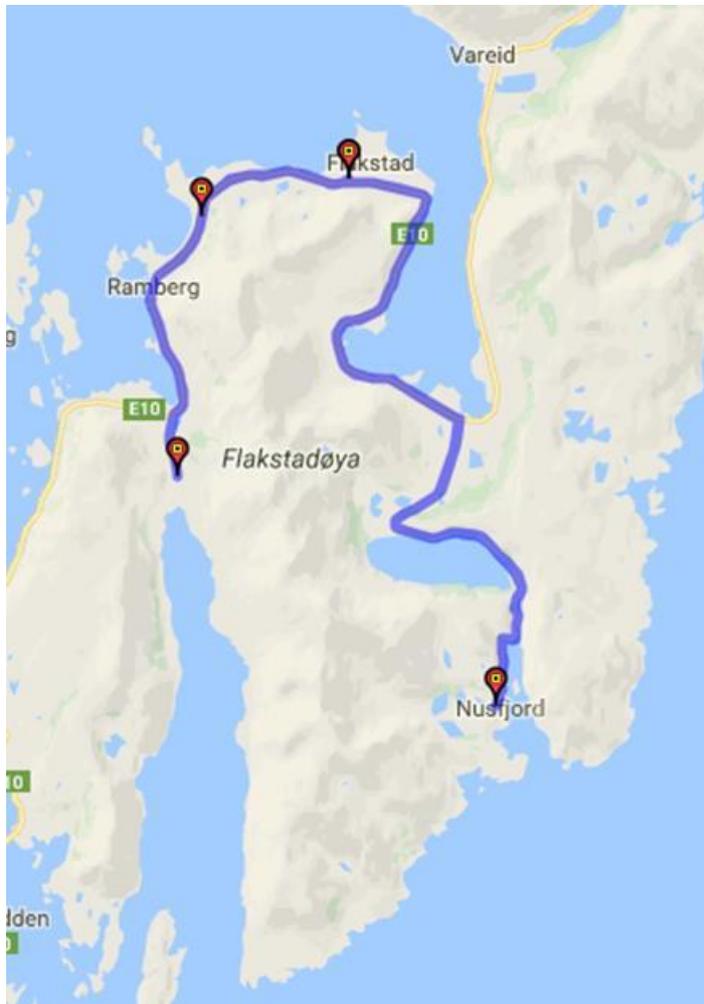

Skagsanden is one of Lofoten's most photographed beaches, especially as a location for northern lights in winter. Located along the E10 a few kilometers east from Ramberg, this flat, sandy beach often provides scenic reflections of the surrounding mountain terrain. Additionally, the sides of the beach provide rocky outcroppings for a variety of photographic opportunities, depending on the tide and waves.

I generally don't go to Skagsanden as a destination, but find it to be a good stopping point between other locations if the light is right. If you are staying in Reine during winter, then this will be your nearest beach for northern lights with minimal light pollution.

Skagsanden is 3km east from Ramberg, just before the turnoff to Flakstad. There is a large parking area that you can't miss.

Pujada a VOLANDSTIND

Skjelfjord, Flakstadøy

547 meters

2.25 km

Easy

1-2 hours

Though the mountain looks imposing from below, the route to the summit is well worn and easy to follow. This is a nice and easy trail for the most part, with a couple big steps and then some rocky sections on the upper slopes of the mountain. This is a good introduction to hiking on Lofoten.

Getting There

Rutòmetre LOFOTEN 2017

The trail begins in Skjelfjord, a few kilometres west from Ramberg. From the E10, turn south into Skjelfjord. As you approach the village, there will be an orange building on the right, with cod racks on the opposite side. Park in the parking area next to the building. Look for the large boulder ahead of you and follow the obvious trail towards the fence and through the gate.

The Trail

Passing through the gated fence, keep the large boulder to your right as you follow the trail along the side of the hill roughly following the path of the power lines. The trail here is in good condition and easy to follow. Eventually you will gain some elevation and pass over a small creek and arrive at a wind shelter overlooking Skjelfjord.

Follow the trail past the shelter towards the steepish hill ahead of you. The trail weaves its way back and forth under the power lines as you gain elevation up the sometimes rocky hillside. As the trail begins to flatten, you will head more west, with the clearly visible ridge of Vollandstind towards your right. Keep to the trail as it passes over another small stream when you turn north and join the ridge at around 225 meters elevation.

From here, the trail takes you along the ridge, heading north. The trail remains mostly clear, though there are a few sections of boulders which need to be crossed, at which point the trail becomes faint. Keep to the ridge and you'll eventually pick up the trail if you lost it. Keep going up.

Eventually the ridge will flatten out as it takes you towards the cairn marked summit, on the northern side of the mountain. You can stop there, or make a short, but steepish descent/ascent to another summit, with fantastic views over the Fredvang bridges.

Camping

A creative camper will be able to find a spot for a tent on the summit. Otherwise, the mountain is relatively simple and straightforward that camping isn't really necessary. No water available.

There are also several places for a tent where the trail joins the bottom of the ridge, though this area is also on the boggy side for the most part.

Storsandnes

The secret is now out about Storsandnes, a quiet little beach on the east side of Flakstadøy. It used to be that I would rarely see another photographer here, but in recent years it seems people are heading here more and more to escape the relative crowds at Uttakleiv and Haukland.

Depending on the tides, Storsandnes can provide a good variety of shots, especially in the twilight of winter. Facing to the north, it is a good location for northern lights, though there are no immediate peaks in the background, making it more of a seascape type shot.

Parking is available in the pullout just past the beach (try to avoid parking at the passing area next to the beach).

Myrland beach

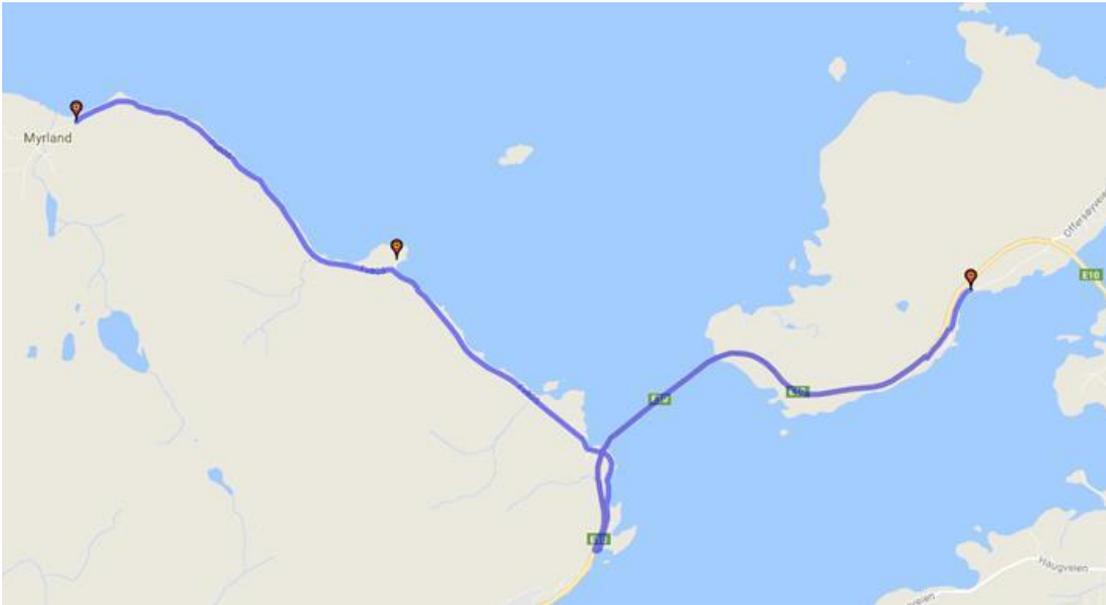

Myrland is another one of Lofoten's hidden gems, though it has been growing in popularity in recent years, especially among winter photography tours. The draw of this small, sandy beach is the assortment of large boulders perfectly placed in the tide line. Though facing north into the open ocean, there is not much of a mountain backdrop to this location.

In big winter storms from the north, the crashing waves here can almost be unreal as they pound the coastline. Though the aftermath can leave the beach devoid of sand for some weeks.

Small pullout for parking.

Myrland beach (68.16443, 13.36999) - Offersøykammen (68.15379,13.51466)// 14 min, 9 km

Offersøykammen

Mountain Name: Offersøykammen – Location: Vestvågøya – Elevation: 436m – Difficulty: Easy
– Time: 1 hour

Offersøykammen is a small peak rising from the turbulent waters of the Nappstraumen on the western edge of Vestvågøya. Almost an island in its own right, the views from the summit overlook the flats of central Vestvågøya to the east, while the mountain wall of Flakstadøya rises to the west. An easy and well worn trail leads to the summit, making Offersøykammen a popular ‘Sunday hike’ among the locals.

Getting There

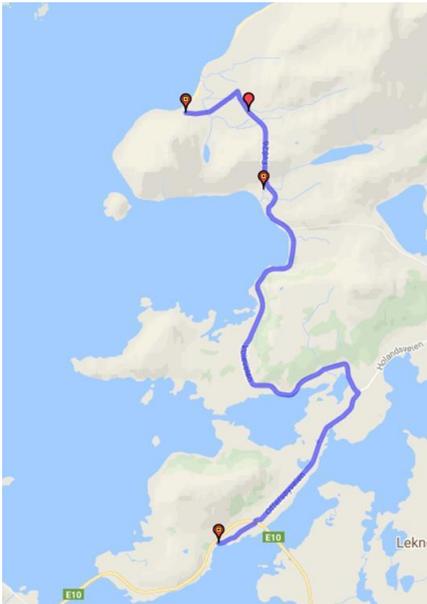

Offersøykammen is located on the north side of the E-10, just to the east of the Nappstaumen tunnel entrance. From Leknes, the distance is 6.5 km. Two parking options are available. The first is a small pullout on the E-10, only when traveling to the west (ie: from Leknes), with room for 2-3 cars if everyone parks nicely. When driving from Leknes, the pullout is approximately 200m past the blue sign ‘Kunst 800m.’

The alternate parking area is located on Offersøyveien, running parallel to the E-10. If traveling from from Leknes, after making the turn to ‘Å’ and crossing the bridge, make a left turn at the road marked ‘Skreda,’ this is Offersøyveien. Drive 600m until you see the obvious parking area on the right. Park here. Walk up to the E-10, and the trail starts at the pullout on the north side.

The Trail

From the pullout area on the E-10, the trail is immediately visible, heading uphill into the forest. The route heads through the trees for several hundred meters before climbing above the tree line. From here, the trail splits on occasion, just keep heading up. The first section is the steepest and the grade gradually decreases as you approach the summit. Soon you will be at the fairly flat summit. Be mindful of the cliffs on the north side. Enjoy the views.

También hay que llegar a la playa de Uttakleiv.

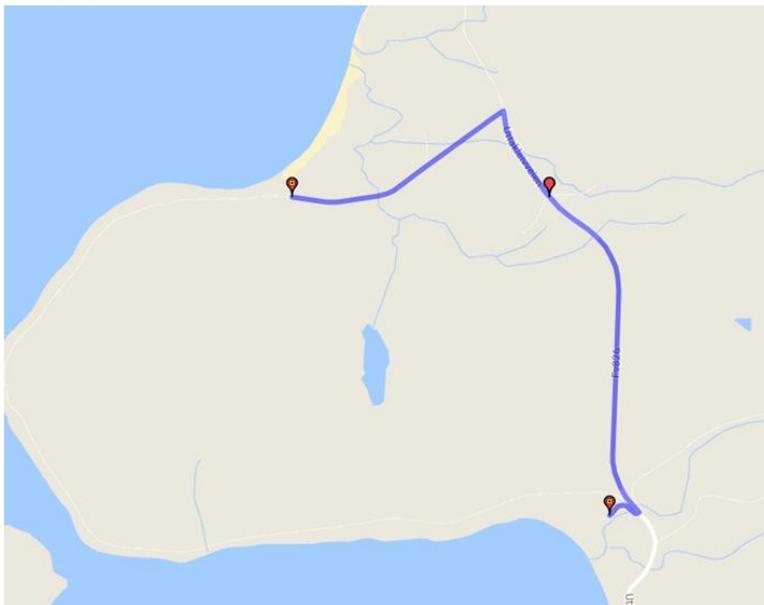

Hay que cruzar el túnel hasta Uttakleiv, y justo antes de llegar al núcleo del pueblo se ve un caminito (al principio del camino cartel indica 100nok) donde se puede acceder.

Uttakleiv is the most photographed beach on Lofoten. The scenic rocky shoreline on the left side of the beach provides near limitless photographic possibilities, while the sandy middle section allows for even more areas to explore. In winter, you will likely be bumping elbows with other photographers, while in summer it is a popular camping and midnight sun destination, with campfires spread across the beach.

With the horizon open to the north, Uttakleiv is a good location for northern lights, especially if combined with Haukland and Vik, just down the road, should the lights change locations in the sky.

The parking is on the left side of the beach, a short drive past the village. This is also a popular place for camping on the grassy dunes behind the beach.

Rutòmetre LOFOTEN 2017

Haukland is one of Lofoten's most famous beaches. The white sand and crystal blue waters make Haukland a popular summer destination among tourists, many even brave enough to go for an afternoon swim! In winter, this beach can have a sublime beauty, and makes for one of the best sunrise or sunset locations on Lofoten. Though popular among tour groups, and you will likely find Haukland filled with tripods and covered in footprints.

After a fresh overnight snowfall, I would make Haukland your first priority to try and photograph it in a pristine state

Just before entering the tunnel to Utakleiv is a parking area on the left. No camping is allowed here.

Unstad is one of Lofoten's most popular beaches, especially with its growth as a surfing destination in recent years. Many big name photographers have come here to photograph the wave action over the last couple years. The beach itself has a nice sandy middle section, though there are often issues with seaweed, while the sides of the beach consist of scenic boulders fading into the water.

Photographically, the beach is best shot from the right side, looking across to the mountain peaks rising from the left. As a northern lights destination, Unstad is not always the best, as the beach is relatively closed in, though the aurora do occasionally appear in the right part of the sky.

There is parking on the left or right side of the beach and then a 1 minute walk. I usually find myself on the left side and shooting towards the southwest.

Lofotr Viking Museum (68.24516,13.75712) - Eggum (68.30814,13.65414) // 17 min 11 km

Eggum

Otro lugar donde hay que llegar es a Eggum (al norte de Bøstad y el museo), aunque ya no se podrá ver el “sol de medianoche” porque aquí es hasta el 14-07, hay que llegar a esta zona y continuar por una pista de tierra hasta una rotonda (depositar dinero en hucha) y seguir hasta un prado (hay agua) para ver o pernoctar.

no eches nada en la hucha del principio si os vais a quedar a hacer noche, directamente entra, aparca y vas al bar que hay en la instalación y pagas solo la tarifa de pernocta. También hay WC en el sitio y hazte las rutas que hay, el entorno es magnifico y muy bello, lago, cascada etc.

Eggum is perhaps most popular as a midnight sun watching destination and in the height of summer, dozens of campers will line the coastline. While there is a series of small, white sandy beaches running the length of the village, Eggum is better known for the rocky coastline past the village, where a small visitor center (summer only) and the old WW2 radar tower are located.

Parking available at the end of the road past the village.

The fishing village of Eggum lies on the seaward side of Vestvågøy island, alone between the ocean and the mountains. The place attracts numerous visitors who come to experience the midnight sun. Facing the open ocean is a rest area in the shape of an amphitheatre with a car park and service facilities. On the west side of the car park stands an intricate artwork by Marcus Raetz: a head looking out over the sea with the top either down or up, depending on your angle of vision.
